NEWSLETTER #105 JULY 2022

A Confession from Jane

Received wisdom suggests that the best answer to a question about strengths and weaknesses in a job interview is to assert “my strength is my weakness.” This works especially well if one is, for example, a perfectionist (who wouldn’t want to hire a self-aware perfectionist?). In my case, however, I must confess to a weakness that is merely a weakness: I hate to ask for money.

Yet, WIKISTIM, which has benefitted from countless hours of my applied perfectionism, would cease to exist without donations. Fortunately, before the pandemic, the North American Neuromodulation Society (NANS), under the leadership of Dr. Todd Sitzman, who recognized the value of WIKISTIM from the time the project was just a gleam in our eyes, donated a substantial sum for each of three years. This freed me substantially from the dreaded exercise of applying for grants from companies whose application processes are geared to one-time events with a start and stop date, a venue, etc. WIKISTIM, of course, is an on-going project that does not rely on a physical location and, as such, is the proverbial square peg that doesn’t fit into the round holes of “required” answers on the forms.

Now, however, until the NANS annual meeting revenue recovers from the pandemic, I must once again apply to industry for grants and implore you, Gentle Reader, to make a donation via the DONATE link.

Some questions to ask yourself:

- Do I use WIKISTIM to look up publications?
- Do I want WIKISTIM to be available when I need it?
- Do I rely on the WIKISTIM monthly newsletter to help me stay current with the literature?
- Do I rely on the newsletter to build my library of free publications?

- Do I want to consign Jane to an annual struggle with dreaded grant applications or free her to continue WIKISTIM development?
- Is WIKISTIM worth as much to me as my monthly streaming services? (If 600 people donated $16/month, our budget would be met.)

Thank You to Dr. Abell

Dr. Thomas Abell, our GES editor, didn't wait to be asked, and we thank him for the generous donation he made to WIKISTIM last month.

Other News

WIKISTIM now has 1623 subscribers. Thank you for spreading the word!
